Dropping Into A Concrete Curl

IN THE WINTER, when the surf is down or it's just plain too hassle with a wetsuit, wave riders turn to concrete curls r-wheeled riding vehicles. On most weekends and after a few usually can be found in the concrete basin in Kill hills, rebounding off walls, careening into the air, hooting, g, having a good time. Many of them wear cushioned knee ow pads to protect against ~~beefs~~ In top photo above ard Hedgepeth drops into the basin as other skateboarders up at a drop zone. In above left photo David Ross goes rne; and above right Chuck Dail spins around at the peak of crete curl. In summer, the skateboard paradise is filled with r and bumper boats. It was originally designed as a eboard park. (J. Glass photos)
